Donna T. Dube, 54

Donna was born on March 1, 1953, in Danvers. She was the daughter of the late William and Greta Fudge Hayden.

Donna attended school in Massachusetts. She was a graduate of Danvers High School, and following graduation she attended and graduated from the Essex Agricultural College.

Donna was clearly one that enjoyed what the world had to offer. She worked as a floral designer for Sturley's Florist in Rochester, N.H. as well as freelancing on her own at times. Her abilities in floral design, gardening, and plant care clearly showcased her green thumb.

One could often find Donna outdoors. If she wasn't in her garden, she was out on a nature hike, or camping with her family. She enjoyed traveling to see the beauty that God had created.

Donna also enjoyed interior decorating, hunting down treasure at antique stores, and sharing time with her family.

Her caring, loving and sacrificial nature did not go unnoticed. Even in her final moments it was those unselfish characteristics that surfaced in a time of tragedy, as she struggled to save her granddaughter, Sapphire from the rising floodwaters.

Donna's life is a true inspiration for many, and an example of God's call to life.

Surviving Donna's passing are her husband, Richard Dube, of Lebanon, Maine; a daughter, Rachel Dube of Manchester, N.H.; a son, Jonathan Dube of Lebanon, Maine; two sisters, Margaret Roy of Beverly, Maryanne Clark of Greensboro, N.C.; and a brother, William Hayden of Lebanon, Maine. LIVERMORE FALLS ME
Mary Ann J. Dube, 69, of Sabattus, found eternal peace on July 7, 2007 after a courageous battle with cancer.

She was born October 18, 1937 in Chisom, the daughter of the Late Lucien J. and Juliette V. (Bellmore) Dube. She attended St. Rose of Lima Parochial School, Livermore Falls High School for three years, and subsequently graduated from Sacred Heart Academy in Jackman, Maine in 1956. Following graduation, she worked at the State House in Augusta for nine years.

In years following, she raised two daughters while residing in Lewiston, Phillips, Livermore Falls and Sabattus. During that time she worked various part-time jobs and eventually cared for her mother for the remaining ten years of Juliette’s life. She was a member of St. Rose of Lima Church of Jay and then, after relocating to the Lewiston area, she became a loyal member of Holy Family.

Mary Ann will be remembered for the love she had for her family and many friends. She enjoyed nature; animals, vegetable gardening and performing yard work. Her other pastimes included doing jig saw puzzles and baking homemade treats, which she would give as gifts during her favorite times of the year, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The family wishes to extend their greatest appreciation to Dr. Nicki Erickson and her staff in the Oncology Department, Dr. Grenville Jones and his staff in Radiation Oncology at CMMC, as well as Cindy Halliday and the staff at Androscoggin Home Health and Hospice. Most of all, gratitude is extended to loved ones and friends who have shown support and kindness during Mary Ann’s life and subsequent illness.

“I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness or abilities that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not deft it for neglect, for I shall not pass this way again.”

William Penn

Therefore, services and interment will be held at a later date at St. Rose of Lima Church in Jay and Holy Cross Cemetery in Livermore. SALEM -- Joan (Dunshead) Boudreau, 65, of Salem, a prominent figure in Salem's modern history, died suddenly at home.

Adventurous, creative, hardworking, generous, talented and caring are some of the adjectives used to describe Mrs. Boudreau. It is this spirit that helped her courageously survive four bouts with cancer including breast, kidney, pancreatic, and thyroid. She chaired the NSMC 1997 Cancer Walk in Salem.

Mrs. Boudreau was born and raised in Salem and became a prominent figure to the community throughout her life. She always said, "there isn't any place in the world like Salem."

Mrs. Boudreau has been called a "pioneer of urban renewal in Salem." One of the reasons for this title was her purchase of the Lyceum Restaurant in 1971. This historic building was the first project downtown to be restored into an active and successful business. The building had lapsed into disrepair and everyone thought she was silly to have taken such a risk, but she saw a city on the verge of rebirth in Salem.

Mrs. Boudreau was president of the Salem Redevelopment Authority for 14 years and was a member of the board at Salem Hospital. She was also president of the Salem Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Business Person of the Year, She received the Hawthorne Historic Salem News-MA-

Preservation Award in 2001 for her strong commitment to community involvement and she was the first woman Grand Marshal of the Salem Heritage Days Parade.

Mrs. Boudreau was very well known by her family and patrons for her love of cuisine. She studied cuisine at the London Cooking School and it is this knowledge that helped build the Lyceum Restaurant's well-known reputation and her ever-lasting family recipes.

She will be always remembered for her outgoing spirit and kindness to others. This spirit will be forever in her family's hearts.

She is survived by her husband, Lee Harrington and her three sons, Wilfred Boudreau of Chicago, Robert Boudreau, of Beverly, and Beau Boudreau, of Denver, one brother, Charles Dunshead of Vista, Calif., and one sister, Claire Melville, of Newbury, as well as five grandchildren, Jeffrey and Sydney Boudreau, and Thomas, Joseph and Nola Boudreau. She was the daughter of the late officer Wilfred Dunshead and Rose Dunshead of Salem; and sister of the late Doris Anne Dunshead.

Emile Dion, Phillips Exeter teacher

By Matt Collette

Emile J. Dion Jr., a longtime teacher of modern languages at Phillips Exeter Academy, died Feb. 6 while on a family vacation in Santiago, Chile. He was 73.

Mr. Dion, know as Chip, joined the Exeter faculty in 1962 and taught until his retirement in January 2007. He taught Spanish, French, and German, led the modern languages department, and served as director of the summer school. He also coached club tennis, soccer, and swimming at the elite New Hampshire prep school.

"He was a bright, generous, and caring person who will be greatly missed," said his daughter, Jennifer Humphrey of Kittery, Maine.

Mr. Dion spent 26 years living in the dormitories as the resident faculty member in Peabody Hall, Kirkland, and Browning House.

GLEBE CORRESPONDENT

Kendra Stearns O'Donnell, a former principal at Exeter, said Mr. Dion's "energy, leadership, and caring attitude" set him apart.

"He was demanding," said Vicky Baggs, the current head of the Phillips Exeter modern languages program. "But he could be very encouraging" for students.

Mr. Dion pushed for a context-based approach to learning languages, and today all Exeter students learn foreign languages from books and literature rather than vocabulary lists, Baggs said.

Until he was in his late 60s, he led trips abroad each year so students could immerse themselves in a language.

A native of Derry, N.H., and resident of Exeter, he attended the University of New Hampshire and earned a master's degree in education and languages from Harvard. He served in the US Navy in the late 1950s and early '60s and spent time in the Mediterranean, which influenced his love of languages and travel.

In addition to his daughter, Mr. Dion leaves his wife, Grace, of Exeter and two sons, Skip of San Francisco, and Christopher of Exeter.

A funeral Mass will be said at 11 a.m. today at St. Michael's Church in Exeter, N.H.

Eve Curie Labouisse, at 102; wrote biography of Marie Curie

Oct 20, 2007

By Margot Fox

NEW YORK — Eve Curie Labouisse, a journalist and humanitar-ian best known for her biography of her mother, the Nobel laureate scientist Marie Curie, died Monday at her home on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. She was 102.

Published in 1937, “Madame Curie” chronicled the life of Marie Curie, who earned the Nobel Prize twice, in physics in 1903 (the award was shared with her husband, Pierre Curie, and Henri Bec-querel) and in chemistry in 1911.

Curie’s biography followed her mother from her birth and childhood in Poland through her education in France and her discovery, with her husband, of the radioactive elements radium and polonium. The book quickly became a best-seller and in 1943 was made into a Hollywood film starring Greer Garson as Marie and Walter Pidgeon as Pierre. Following the book, The New York Times, Charles Fosse called it “a biography that stirs the heart and the mind by a fine counterpoint of sense and sensibility; a great story superbly told.”

In the 70 years since its publication, “Madame Curie” has endured as a classic of scientific biography. Devoured by generations of academically minded girls. Some modern critics, however, have taken it to task for drawing a veil over the less saintly aspects of Marie Curie’s life, notably her affair with a married man in the years after Pierre’s death. Though the affair was a scandal in France at the time, Marie Labouisse’s biography, published three years after her mother died, does not mention it.

In wide demand as a lecturer on “Madame Curie,” was published, Mrs. Labouisse was also known for her staunch public ader of the Free French cause af-after the Nazis occupied France in 1940. After the war, she was a publisher of the French newspaper Paris Libre, and in the early 1950s was a special adviser to the secretary general of NATO.

Her other works include “Journey Among Warriors,” a best-selling account of her nine-month trip across a series of wartime fronts: North Africa, Iraq, Iran, Russia, India, Burma, and China. Throughout her life, Mrs. Labouisse appeared to have taken her famous family in stride. “You are not making up my story by any chance?”, she asked in 1972. “You see, I am the only one of the family not to have won a No-be Prize.” (In 1935, Mrs. Labouisse’s eldest sister, Irene-Joliot-Curie, received the Nobel Prize in chemi for their synthesis of new ranulsive elements.)

But Mrs. Labouisse had abundant talents of her own. Trained as a concert pianist, she performed throughout France and Belgium and later wrote music criticism for several French periodicals. It was also considered to be one of the most beautiful women in Paris in the 1920s and 1930s.

Eve Denis Curie was born in Paris on Dec. 6, 1901. She secretly knew her father: In April 1906, while crossing a rain-streaked street, Pierre Curie slipped under the wheels of a passing horse-drawn wagon and was killed. Marie Curie, her daughter later said, could not bear to speak of him and plunged herself even more deeply into her work.

Mrs. Labouisse would later say that, as a child, she saw little of her mother, becoming close to her only as a teenager and afterward, as she nursed her through her final illness. Marie Curie died in 1934, at 66, of leukemia, which was believed to have been caused by her prolonged exposure to radioactive material.

In 1940, after France fell, Eve Curie went to England to work for the Free French. She later served in Europe with the women’s division of General Charles de Gaulle’s Fighting French. In May 1941, the Vichy government revoked her French citizenship; she eventually settled in the United States.

In 1954, Eve Curie married Henry Rockett from Labouisse, a 35-year-old Frenchman who was later the US ambassador to Greece. From 1965 to 1976, Henry Labouisse was the executive director of UNICEF, and he accepted the Nobel Peace Prize when it was awarded to UNICEF in 1965.

Henry Labouisse died in 1987. In addition to her stepdaughter, Peretz, of Cambridge, Mass., Mrs. Labouisse leaves four step-grandchildren and 11 step-great-grandchildren. Her only surviving sister, Joliot-Curie, died in 1956, at 58, of leukemia, which was believed to have been caused by her exposure to radioactive material.

To the end of her life, her stepdaughter Anne L. Peretz said, Mrs. Labouisse felt enormous guilt that she alone among the women in her family had escaped a life of ra-radiation and its consequences.

William E. Aubuchon Jr., at 91; ran family chain of hardware stores

By Bryan Marquard

Three times a year, William E. Aubuchon Jr. would visit each hardware store that his father had founded, checking on his performance. Each day, the old man would scan store ledgers, which he bi-duly drove home with colleagues every September, December, and March.

"When I learned from him was the art of knowing who each person was in each store from a personal point of view," said M. Marcus Moros Jr., president of Aubuchon Hardware Inc. "Mr. Aub-uchon wanted to learn about each worker’s family and about the em-ployee’s career aspirations." Moros said, and also spent hours discussing the nuts and bolts of each store more successful.

"He always promised from within, so you always had something to talk about in point forward," Moros said.

Mr. Aubuchon, who for 43 years ran the business his father started 59 years ago, died in his Fitchburg home on November 27 from heart failure. He was 91 and had stepped down from running the company in 1995. Born in Fitchburg, a town in north-central Massachusetts to the north of Boston, a town in north-central Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, founded in Fitchburg’s "That man was a very respectful relationship," one of his sons said. "Here’s my dad looking at the source of his father’s... who knew he couldn’t dest the initial entrepreneurial busitime, he was looking at serving on the family name. That creative man was allowed to grow the best.

Today, Moros said, 20 family members work with the Aub-uchon Hardware chain.

"This represents not just with family business, but this is an example of a small company that has be-

When he returned from the war, he repaired the family busisness and spent decades rebuilding the family business.

"You needed every letter and put them in a three-ring binder when I got there," his son, William E. Aubuchon III, who is now chief executive of the company. "By just reading the letters from my grandmother, you could deduce how he lived." Born in Fitchburg, Mr. Aubuchon graduated from Auburn Preparatory School and Assumption College, both in Worcester.

During the 43 years he led Aub-uchon Hardware, Mr. Aubuchon was prominent in Auburn’s business community. Aubuchon Realty Co. Among more civic activities, he also served on the boards of Auburn and Fitchburg Hospital and on the Board of Trustees at Assumption College, where Aubuchon Hall was named for him. A dormitory building also was named in his honor at Fitchburg State College, which along with Worcester State had awarded Mr. Aubuchon an honorary degree.

"He was quite a force in the local community," Moros said. "When he talked, the community listened. He was such a consuma-nate businessman. But he also looked at his business, he had a great mind for running the business. It’s hard to understand how he managed his community involvement.

With the chain of hardware stores, "he didn’t really want to manage the detail," said Moros. "It didn’t fit in the detail. It’s just a bit of right down to one store at a time.

That meant constantly managing each store, which was carefully planned, and planning when it was displayed. To Mr. Aubuchon, merchandise did not exist in a vacuum. Moros said. There had to be a reason why each item on the shelf went to the items on either side. And while he almost always talked businesses — even during those tours of the chain stores — he warned his employees that the discussions were hardly dry. Moros said. "It’s not one thing, this is the truth." Moros said. "You’re having fun running the business, so you talk about business continuously and it was to the best of L. There’s a always a better way to do something.

One way Mr. Aubuchon kept the business fresh and active was by simply including it as part of his daily correspondence.

"He had a nervous approach to the fact that anyone anybody’s name more with whom he was familiar appeared in the local newspaper, he would cut it out and send it to other people," Moros said. "If he got a friendly note, many handwritten notes with clipping... In

In addition to his son, Mr. Aub-uchon left his wife of 64 years, Curie Cornwell; another son, Donal of Shrewsbury, three grandsons, Martin Young of Lee, XLI, Laura of New York City, and Anne of Boston; and a brother, Peter of Fitchburg; and three great-grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.
